Be part of a dynamic Forensic Psychiatric services health professionals team working closely in conjunction with the Courts and Corrections services as well as local general mental health providers. There are around 30 clinical psychologists in total for all disciplines inside and outside of forensics who provide services to clients which offers a great professional network for other mental health workers. There are close links as well with the University of Waikato's clinical psychology programme plus joint training and research facility.

Primary Duties:

Client provides support both inside several prisons and in the community for their geographic area. They work 8 to 4:30pm Monday through Friday with no weekend work. They are a team of 34 at present which includes nurses, psychiatrists, social workers, drug and alcohol counsellors and administrative support.

Their vision and mission is to make a positive difference in peoples' lives so that when they leave prison they do not return. Examples of interventions includes anger management, system reduction, coping skills, study, returning to a healthier environment than where they lived before entering prison, wellness plans and other programmes.

Benefits:

Some of the benefits of living and working in New Zealand include:

1. Minimum of four weeks' paid annual leave after your first year;
2. 11 paid public holidays for a total of 31 days paid off from work;
3. Perhaps a little help with some of your relocation costs;
4. Living and working where malpractice/indemnity insurance may not be required;
5. Not having to deal with insurance companies in order to be paid for your services;
6. Our unique and wonderful lifestyle as described at <http://www.alignrecruitment.com/lifestyle.html>; and
7. Ongoing professional development is encouraged and supported with a generous allowance to their clinical psychologists.
